PRESS RELEASE

WFW to strengthen its Singapore corporate offering with return of Partner Damian Adams

3 March 2020

Watson Farley & Williams (“WFW”) is delighted to announce that corporate expert Damian Adams has re-joined the firm as a Partner after six years at Simmons & Simmons in Singapore. Damian was previously a Partner in WFW’s Singapore office. He first joined WFW in 1997 and spent time as an Associate in WFW’s London and Singapore offices.

Damian specialises in greenfield, early stage and growth capital investment, M&A and other corporate transactional work, as well as asset finance matters, across a range of the firm’s sectors including maritime, energy and natural resources. He advises a diverse international portfolio of clients including venture capital fund managers, private equity and infrastructure investors and family offices. Having worked in Singapore for two decades, Damian has a deep understanding of the local market.

WFW Singapore Head Mei Lin Goh commented: “I am delighted to welcome Damian back to the firm. He not only enhances our corporate expertise in our sectors of specialism, but also enables us to offer existing clients greater support across service lines”.

Damian added: “I very much look forward to re-joining the firm at which I began my career. I’m particularly excited by the opportunity to work alongside WFW Singapore’s existing corporate partner, Nick Dingemans. It will be great to reconnect with clients, continue to serve my existing client base and to build out the firm’s cross-border corporate practice in Southeast Asia”.
