TOP TAKEAWAYS FROM 2022

Traders who typically see volatility as a positive opportunity are experiencing a significant need for additional liquidity to meet margin calls due to extremely high energy prices, which has resulted in many trading houses reconsidering their risk appetite for new debt

Overall sentiment from traders towards their banking lenders was positive with larger traders having not experienced issues securing additional liquidity during this volatile and uncertain time

There is expected to be a rise in demand for alternative financing, despite the higher margins that come with this, with even the big traders constantly seeking to diversify their lending pool

ESG and sustainability is very much at the forefront of every discussion, but this discussion is evolving to lend more focus towards social and governance, rather than environmental being the sole focus

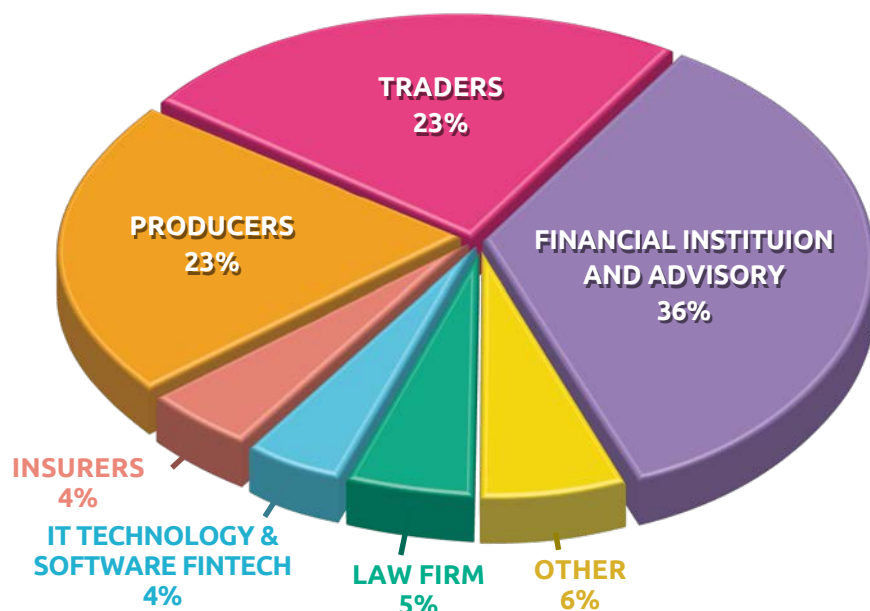

Reputational risk is the biggest motivation for industry participants when it comes to ESG strategies, with litigation risk being the second most important motivation

Supply chain disruption solutions have evolved due to the host of issues created by the pandemic, but there are still not sufficient solutions for SMEs who may not be able to afford supply chain management

There has been some tangible progress in terms of digitalisation with deals such as Sucafina's digital borrowing base with blockchain finance platform Komgo as digital agent. Structures like this are expected to be more widely adopted but the industry is currently in the early stages

There is some sentiment that post COP-26, fossil fuels have been demonised too extremely and too early without enough other cleaner energy supplies available to replace the supply

2022 ATTENDEES

"An event rich in developing relationships"

Valentin Levraux, Sucafina

"A pleasure to meet all the right individuals"

Peter Hopkins, Drum Risk & Drum Advisory
