TXF Training Supply Chain Finance

In September 2016 we organised our first supply chain finance training course, which tackled how to make the most of supply chain finance programmes and use them to improve your working capital. This year we'll be taking this training course to Miami, Amsterdam and Frankfurt clearing the confusion that surrounds this useful short term tool.

What will be covered?

This course will act as a comprehensive guide to supply chain finance. What it is, how it works and the risks involved. You will learn the theory and the history of supply chain finance and, more importantly, how you can use it to unlock capital. In addition, you will receive practical tips about how to implement and measure a successful supply chain finance programme so you can take the theory out of the classroom and into your organisation.

Throughout there will be opportunities to ask questions, complete practise exercises and voice your thoughts in surveys which will measure your understanding and address any problems that you encounter.

Who should attend and why?

Corporates/treasurers

This course will teach you how to make the most of this working capital optimisation tool and provide an honest appraisal of how it could work in your business.

You will enjoy the benefits of an academic and practical, expert opinion guiding you through the available options and the best practices.

Financial institutions

Employ a cost-effective, comprehensive and trusted tool to help you train your supply chain specialists.

Gain a broader view of the supply chain finance market, the legal landscape, what programmes are available and how they are structured.

Take away increased commercial insight and discover how to sell the benefits of your programme.

Alternative providers

Learn how traditional providers are developing their offerings and stay informed about the biggest innovations in the industry.

Gain an expert prediction of what the future holds for SCF and how you can stay competitive.

“Very enjoyable and detailed to touch upon the key drivers of supply chain finance. Doug Schoch is an excellent instructor to this subject.”
Joerg Hoermann, AKA Bank
